

Evi Nagler is a consultant Nephrologist at Ghent University Hospital, Belgium. She has acted as methodologist within the Methods support team since 2009 and became ERBP's Vice Chair in 2017. In that role, she has contributed to and co-authored multiple clinical practice guidelines that have been produced by the guideline body. In addition, she has contributed to several Cochrane systematic reviews. As member of the methods support team, she is primarily responsible for providing methodological support to the guideline development working groups. In addition, she is involved with process management and as such engaged in optimizing the tools and techniques used in the management of the guideline development process.